Mason Koeritz

Mason Koeritz, a fifth-year senior at CUNE, is a man of diverse interests. He is equally as likely to be found in the music building at a piano as in the science building mixing chemicals. Because of his deep passion for both music and science, he is a double major in music and chemistry.

"For me, the chemistry is going to be the career and the music is going to keep me sane while doing it," Mason says of his strange combination of studies. Music was always an important hobby of his, and he knew he wouldn't be content with just a minor. Mason plans on attending graduate school for his PhD in organic synthetic chemistry, which he will one day use in combination with another one of his loves, cooking. Because Mason enjoys cooking and baking, his dream job is to be a flavor chemist, a career he learned about while watching the Food Network.

But in his free time between developing new flavors and better ways to make the tastes we all know and love, Mason still plans to make music. During his time at Concordia, he has had the opportunity to compose a number of pieces of music for a variety of instruments, including some choral pieces. One of these pieces, a choral arrangement of "For the Beauty of the Earth," was recently published by Concordia Publishing House, giving Mason the distinguished honor of being a published composer while still an undergraduate.

Mason also composed a unique piece of music for his senior recital last year. Instead of writing a piece of music for an average piano, Mason composed in a format called "prepared piano," originally developed by John Cage. This involved putting random materials such as sticky tack, push pins, and Smarties wrappers between the strings of a piano. He strived to make an unusual format accessible to the average listener.

During his final semester of college, Mason is taking five credits of lesson with the hope of "milking the professors for all they are worth," to learn as much as he can before saying goodbye.

Chelsea Irwin

For many students, Concordia provides the opportunity to broaden their horizons and travel to new places. For junior Chelsea Irwin, her experience abroad began much earlier.

Chelsea's first experience doing mission work abroad was with her church. Her father, a pastor, was searching for a mission opportunity for their church, and he discovered a group that did international mission work in Poland. For the past eight years, Chelsea has gone to Poland every summer to lead a church summer camp.

During her trips, Chelsea has had the opportunity to foster her passion for education, which is now her major. During the camp, counselors from America work with Polish counselors to teach English, as well as to share the love of Christ with students from Poland and the surrounding countries. She is getting an ESL endorsement as part of her degree, and appreciates what she has learned from her time in Poland. She believes that, "a language barrier doesn't define a relationship, and you can still see the connection and the love." Chelsea is confident that this knowledge will help her in her future classroom.

Since she arrived at Concordia, Chelsea has had the opportunity to share her experiences in Poland and to get others involved. She and her father now offer the opportunity for Concordia students to travel with them to Poland. Now, several other Concordia students have spent their summers hard at work teaching and building relationships overseas.

Through the years, Chelsea has made many strong and lasting friendships with the people that she has met in Poland. She is grateful to be able to stay in touch with them from across an ocean. She also gets to see some of her campers come back as counselors.

Above all else, Chelsea's experiences abroad have taught her that, "you don't really see the impact you have on other people until you leave where you are and realize the impact that they've had back on you."

David Kreuger

David Krueger is a junior currently studying to be a Director of Christian Education. He is also one of the first male members of Concordia University, Nebraska's cheer team. David shared some insight about the team, making it a point to mention the large amount of work each member puts into their performance. "It's amazing to watch them do their stuff... It's more work than you might think that it is," he said as he talked about the flyers, the members of the stunt groups which are thrown to execute spins and flips mid-air. "It's a lot more teamwork as well, especially within your own stunt group, because you have to be very communicative and clear about everything you're doing, otherwise the stunt could go wrong," he added, sharing some insight about the disciplined technique which goes into cheerleading. David explained that his team had the feel of a close family, saying, "because if someone's going to fall, you have to catch them. The flyer is the number one priority."

David plans to continue on to find an internship either full time at a church or do half of his internship with a camp before moving on to a church. He found his summer experience at the Lutheran Valley Retreat invaluable, saying, "it was like a reaffirming that I am meant to go into ministry of some sort—and youth ministry in emphasis—and so I'm really looking forward to next summer as well, because I'll hopefully be going back to LVR." One of his favorite past-times (besides anything to do with baseball) is getting to know others. "I love talking with people," he said, "...I get my energy from people, just having conversations with them." David's exceptional people skills will serve him well as he continues to work hard with the cheer team and as he moves on to grow others in discipleship.

Sarah Johnson

Sarah Johnson is one of many outstanding artists studying at CUNE this year. Currently she is a senior in her fifth year working towards earning her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in Studio Art.

At the question of what takes up the most time in her life, Sarah answered "art". She said, "It definitely is art... which I'm really okay with, and I think it will be like that for the rest of my life." Sarah added that she spends quite a bit of time with her close friends, explaining that the meaningful time she shares with them "definitely feels kind of like art, since it's my life that flows into my art." Her relationships inform her work and her nature as a person, she explained.

Though each artist is often associated with a specific style, it can take a lifetime for that style to emerge and solidify. Sarah noted that she is still learning about her own subject interests and mark-making. She said she is working to find "the way I naturally work and the things I naturally am attracted to," and that "I definitely do feel closer to understanding what my possible artistic style would be." One hallmark of her current works is her use of "shards." She elaborated, saying "they've been evolving over the semesters and they have to deal with relationships, and people in my life, and memories, and the good things, and the bad things... They're like pieces of my life that come together to form who I am, as an artist in life and as a person." These shards are small, flat artifacts which are often painted and arranged in a three-dimensional manner.

After Sarah graduates at the end of the year, she looks forward to pursuing her art while she works a separate day job. She will continue to create in her off-time, and she will sell her pieces online and at various festivals around the United States. She is clearly determined, sharing that when she gets home each day she will say to herself, "Okay, but now you need to focus on your passion and your career. Now it's time to get to work."

Student Spotlights

Michael Duffy

At Concordia, many students get involved with the arts. Concordia boasts a large music program and a theatre program that puts on many shows every year. Because of all of these opportunities, students are able to participate in a number of different ways. Some students perform on stage, others work behind the scenes, and some do it all. Senior Michael Duffy, an English major, is one of the select few who spread their talents between many fields. While at Concordia, Michael has acted in a number of plays and musicals, sang in the choir, and directed one-acts. This year, he has taken on a new role: writer and director of a mainstage production.

Michael's play, "Older Days," began as a short story inspired by Psalm 73. "I worked with that a little bit, and as I got a handle on the characters a little bit, then I started writing the script," Michael said. He started writing two years ago, and has shared it with a select few to read and revise. One of these trusted few was the theatre department's fearless leader, Professor Bryan Moore.

"We talked through a lot of things, and it was good just to be able to discuss the work and to get his professional opinion," Michael said. The process of putting together a show is very collaborative. After revisions and readings, Michael was able to cast his show and recruit a student-led team of costumers, set builders, and props workers to bring the whole thing together.

"It's really cool to see people get excited about the work, and to work with them and have this creative hive of people working together," Michael said. In addition to working with his creative team, Michael has loved seeing what the actors bring to the table for the first (but certainly not the last) performance of the script.

As part of the process, Michael has been able to see the show through new eyes as actors begin to work with the script. "I get to see the different interpretations, things I wouldn't always think of that the actors bring in, which I think is a really important part of this."

During his time at Concordia, Michael has participated in Improv as well as theatre productions. These activities have helped him prepare for his future career as a pastor. "I'm going to be doing a lot of talking to people, so being on stage and performing translates well to preaching and even leading Bible studies."

After he graduates this year, Michael will head off to seminary to finish his education, and to share his gifts of writing and communicating with the world as he also shares the message of God.

Meghan Woodruff

Concordia is a unique place that allows students to fill their time with activities and interests that may seem very different from one another. For senior Meghan Woodruff, this is certainly true. She is a math and computer science major who has also spent the last four years working in the costumes shop for Concordia's theatre department. Meghan's interest in math began in her high school chemistry class. "I realized that I do not like chemicals. They kind of scare me. What I really liked about chemistry was the math."

When she got to Concordia, Meghan didn't plan on majoring in computer science. However, because a programming class is required for math majors, Meghan took it and was hooked. She now plans on pursuing a masters degree in data analytics and statistics, with the eventual goal of becoming a data scientist.

"They look at 'big data,' which is kind of a buzzword. They evaluate trends, they make predictions. They teach a machine how to learn from data, then analyze that to make predictions," Meghan said. With the increasing levels of technology used in daily life, career prospects are definitely favorable for people with an interest in computers.

In addition to her work with computers and data, Meghan spends a lot of time with another piece of technology: a sewing machine. She enjoyed sewing in high school, but didn't bring her machine. Someone suggested that she visit the costume shop, and she did, not knowing that she would stumble into a major part of her college experience.

"I went toward the end of my second semester here and they basically offered me the job right away. I just kind of had to prove myself." Now in her senior year, Meghan feels at home in the costume shop. This year, she has even had the opportunity to take on a leadership role, designing the costumes for one of the spring mainstage productions. In addition to improving her sewing skills, Meghan has seen a lot of benefits from her hours in the department.

"I've learned a lot from my boss. I've learned how to handle conflict, which isn't what I expected. I've learned handling being under pressure and staying calm," Meghan said. These skills will serve her well in her future career, as well as what she's learned in her classes.

"I definitely feel like I have a great background for this degree program. Once I get into grad school, I'll learn more of the applications. Concordia focuses on the theory, which is great because it doesn't change." As she goes forward, Meghan will take with her everything that she learned in her time at Concordia, no matter where she learned it.

Rachel Krome

Rachel Krome is a sophomore Biology major with a Human Concentration, a path she chose due to her aspirations to eventually become a doctor. Ever since she was a young child, Rachel has been a part of the medical world. Her mother, a doctor herself, would often take her to work so that she could visit with the patients in the waiting room while Dr. Krome attended to others. As she grew, Rachel became more involved with the field of medicine by volunteering and eventually decided she would follow this passion she loved so much. She hopes to one day become an allergist. When asked why she wanted to pursue that specific field, she answered, "My sister has terrible allergies and it's always something that's kind of interested me... you can have a nine to five job and you're not dealing with life and death on a regular basis."

Rachel has always had Concordia in her life. Her uncle, Russel Mosemann, used to teach computer science at the University. Her family would visit him and attend Concordia's musicals, ensembles, and other such events. Rachel said that she was, "just part of Concordia, and I couldn't really imagine myself anywhere else. It's got the hometown feel while still not actually being your hometown."

When she is not occupied with her many science courses, Rachel enjoys spending time doing theatre and making music. She is currently in the Cantamus choir and the Symphonic Band, and was involved with Mary Poppins in the fall. Her proclivity for the dramatic arts has been with her since grade school. Unfortunately, college leaves less time for acting than she would like. She explained, "I wish I had more time, though, it seems like I can't quite do as much as I want to anymore, but I still love it when I can get it."

As she talked about her development during her time at Concordia, Rachel said, "In high school I'd try everything and want to be a part of everything, and here I've just kind of started choosing what specifically I wanted to be a part of. And I'm not trying as much, but at the same time the stuff that I am trying I'm committed to and stay with, and I'm not just dabbling anymore." She was also willing to share how her faith played in to her decision to attend school here, "I really wanted to go here as a biology major because in any other state school where they have a really good biology program, they don't teach the Christian view of how life was created... here we can talk about creation and evolution in the same thoughts and explain why we think what we do and why we believe what we do about everything.. It's put life into perspective and it's been very, very nurturing."

Lighthouse

The Lighthouse Illuminate to Liberate club is one of Concordia's newest clubs. It was formed by current co-leader and senior Andrea Anderson in 2015 alongside several other members who have since moved on from CUNE. Sarah Van Duser, a junior, is the other leader of the Lighthouse club. Andrea explained that the group is backed by the International Justice Mission and works to build awareness and raise funds for the support of victims of human trafficking. Andrea stated, "light drives out the darkness, and not only is it helping us see it, but the light of Christ is solving the problem."

When Andrea was fourteen, she had passion for the fight against human trafficking, but it was not until a friend introduced her to the documentary, Nefarious Merchants of Souls that she decided to start working towards change. Sarah found her inspiration from a high school friend who participated in Dressember, a month during which girls are encouraged to wear a dress every day in order to prompt conversation about human trafficking and I.J.M.'s goal to end it. Sarah said, "I was hanging out with my friend's little brothers and sisters and going, 'that could be these guys,' and that really put a reality to it... and I was like, 'I've got to do something about it.'" Upon reaching Concordia, Sarah sought out Lighthouse and patiently waited for the new group to find a place for her.

Sarah shared that one of the most powerful results of being in the group is seeing people taken aback when they hear about the problem, saying, "you see their eyes get a little bit big and a little bit sad and you're like, 'This is happening. How do you feel? What are you going to do about it?'" Andrea explained that she is empowered by discussing the issue. "You're taking something that is terrible, but you are using what you know to actually make it better. And so it's a way of saying, 'Satan, you're not going to win, and you can't have them, and we are going to fight for them.'"

Andrea and Sarah have seen the group grow more organized and establish a deeper root in the community during their time in the club. While Andrea will be graduating soon, she noted, "You can work for anti-trafficking efforts in any job." She will continue to discuss her passion beyond her years at Concordia. Sarah, a D.C.E. major, said she was looking forward to working with her future church to spread awareness about the issue and actually work to solve it in any way they can. Sarah stated, "So often we're just talking and talking about it, and you can talk all you want, but unless you're doing something then it's nothing." The dedication of these leaders to discuss and act on their passionate care for others is certain to follow and strengthen them on whatever path they walk.

August 21, 2017 was a legendary date for Concordia University Nebraska. On this date the moon and sun intersected above Seward to produce a magnificent solar eclipse. The period of totality, the time during which the moon covers all but the very outside of the sun from view, was only 1 minute and 30 seconds long, but viewers from all over the country trekked to the Concordia Stadium to witness this cosmic phenomenon. School groups from the area packed the bleachers, college students blanketed the track, and the Physics Department provided commentary from the arena's loudspeakers. As the physics professors counted down to totality, the crowd's bustle slowly quieted until only the voice of the announcer rang throughout the stadium. "Totality!" came the declaration, and the crowd roared with cheering and applause as the moon centered itself between the sun and the Earth. A wave of nighttime-like darkness swept across the sky and the eclipse glasses protecting everyone's eyes from the sun's light were snatched off, and all gazed in wonder at the stunning sight above them. It will be around 370 years before the total solar eclipse comes to Seward again, but total solar eclipses occur about every 18 months somewhere on the globe. Those at Concordia on the day it covered the school will not soon forget its majesty.

Concordia started off the fall semester by entering a competition hosted by the Food Bank of Lincoln to see which college could raise the most money and gather the most non-perishable food for those in need. Concordia named their endeavor Feed the Dawgs, planning several fund-raising events to fill the month of September. The Student Life Office held a back-to-school dance on September 1st, inviting everyone to bring a can of non-perishable food for a chance to enter a drawing for fabulous prizes. The 8th of the month featured a scavenger hunt modeled after the rules exhibited in the Hunger Games films (fortunately, though, canned goods were the only pursued items in this case). On September 15th a "Carnival of Cans" took place in Seward's town square. The Carnival included bounce houses and cotton candy as well as a bus that the school aimed to fill with canned goods from any willing attendees.

Many students and faculty turned out to support the school's endeavor to support families and individuals with fewer resources. While several showed their support by attending the dance, the scavenger hunt, and the Carnival of Cans, some who were unable to attend donated cans to the sizeable stack of non-perishable food items in Janzow. Concordia was bold in its unapologetic support for the Food Bank of Lincoln, and this boldness is what allowed its community to band together in order to Feed the Dawgs.

In Loving Memory

Jason Gutz

Sophomore Jason Gutz of Plainview, Nebraska died in a tragic farm accident on July 5, 2017.

Gutz was an exercise science major, worked as an athletic trainer for the football team and worked in the Training Room. Gutz was an invaluable part of the Concordia community. It is heartbreaking to lose a brother and a friend, but encouraging to know that we will be reunited with him in heaven.

“One of my favorite memories was when he would bring water to us freshman football players that were too small to see what was going on and had to stand in the back!” Gutz’s hall mate Kordell Hamer said.

“Jason treated everyone kindly and didn’t let much get him down, not even chemistry,” Gutz’s hall mate Brady Fehlhafer said. “Jason worked hard at everything he did whether it be his job in the athletic training room, his studies, (or) his relationships with people. Some of my favorite memories with Jason were our conversations when we were brushing our teeth.”

“He was friendly, funny and extremely kind,” Gutz’s hall mate Joseph Greenmyer said. “He always had a smile on his face. My favorite memory is playing 3 on 3 basketball with him in our Lifetime Wellness class and dominating. He was a guy who, as soon as you met him, you would hope the two of you could be friends.”

“As a friend he was amazing—such an awesome guy,” Gutz’s roommate David Carrasco said. “I remember he used to tell me he didn’t really understand soccer, but he came to a lot of our home games. Once he was going to go out with his girlfriend at the time and I had a game. When I came back to the room after the game, I found a box with some pizza in it and a sticky note that said ‘Saw you playing and scoring a goal, that’s my roommate.’”

“I remember a couple times walking into the room late at night after work, and he was playing some music in Spanish, and he’d say ‘I see how you’re happy all the time, this is good stuff!’ Every morning he’d start the day with the best attitude, no matter how bad the day before was, he would get up and say ‘Another day, let’s get it.’ Even though he was loud in the morning, his attitude made me forget about it; he was always positive.”

“One time I was Skyping my family back in Colombia, and, since they don’t speak English, he’d try to communicate with them and say some stuff in Spanish, and my family absolutely loved it.”

“It was awesome how open minded he was and how willing he was to make mistakes and learn. When he was going to start working with the athletic training room, he had to learn how to tape ankles and stuff. He asked me if he could practice on me because he was going to be tested on as part of the interview. Once when I sprained my ankle the training room was closed. Since his major was exercise science, of course he’d have some stuff to work with in the room. He took care of my ankle; it was awesome, I felt like I had my own personal therapist.”

“As a friend, Jason was always willing to lend a hand,” Gutz’s RA Daniel Hakes said. “He always let me borrow his vacuum and even would occasionally drop by my room with food.”

“I remember at the end of the school year I texted all my guys that we were having a hall meeting that night at 10. For some reason I forgot about it and walked into the dorm around 10:25. Jason, Taylor Beck, and Kordell Hamer were sitting on the steps waiting for me. Jason saw me and started laughing and never let me hear the end of it.”

“Jason was in the room next to mine and in Schuelke there are doors between rooms that are permanently locked but they still have an inch underneath that is open which allows sound to travel between rooms. My favorite memory of this was one night around midnight, I was laying in bed trying to fall asleep and all of a sudden and I heard multiple curse words. I knocked on his door and he let me in. I asked him what was going on and he replied, ‘I hate my chemistry class so much.’”

“Other than this incident, Jason was always quiet, respectful, and considerate towards others. He was a hard worker and a dedicated friend. We got along very well because we gave each a hard time. At the end of the spring semester I had this giant monkey piñata which I was going to throw away but decided against it because I thought I’d be more fun to hide it in my resident’s rooms. Jason would lock his room before leaving so I couldn’t put the monkey piñata in his room. At the end of the semester he helped Brady Fehlhafer hide it in my room and I didn’t find it until after all my residents were gone. He was one of the best prankers in the hall.”

“I’m going to miss Jason, especially this next year, because I would have had him as a resident in Dorcas this coming school year. I thoroughly enjoyed the time I was able to spend with him and look forward to seeing him again in heaven someday.”

“I am the resurrection and the life. Whoever believes in me, though he die, yet shall he live, and everyone who lives and believes in me shall never die”

We have reached the end now, hopefully closer as a school and stronger as individuals. We have walked through a myriad of struggles and challenges, but so also we have walked through moments of joy and peace. As Concordia's theme verse for the year, Romans 5:1, reads, "Therefore, since we have been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." It is important to remember, as we finish our work and look ahead to the next task, that we are not alone in our struggles and have already been given new life. Each facet of our lives is not calm at the same time, but in our faith we are always given that peace from our King.
